General information

ECC has introduced with “SecureDocXpress (SDX)” a system that provides its clients an option of encrypted data transmission. This web-based SDX transmission technology offers a further reliable procedure for exchanging information and documents between ECC and external partners.

No software needs to be installed for this purpose. If you wish to exchange data via the SDX platform, you only need internet access and a browser supporting SSL. As a result, less secure data transmission from the client to ECC via the internet (e.g. via e-mail) or other communication channels can be replaced. The use of SDX offers the following advantages:

- Encrypted communication of data without additional software installation
- Trouble-free and secure transfer of large data volumes
- Simple and self-explanatory operation

A description of the SDX platform is contained in this documentation:
